

Fig. E-1

A graph of the distribution of the component sizes by gender highlights the preponderance of smaller component sizes in female patients. The median size of the components was 42 mm in female patients and 48 mm in male patients. This difference affords a nearly 35% increased surface area for cement fixation in the larger size.